Candidates begin federal election campaign

BY LEA SMALDON

Didsbury Review

For the first time in 15 years, Didsbury residents will have a new member of parliament to represent them at the federal level.

Election signs began going up Sunday as candidates for Myron Thompson's former Member of Parliament position got a jump start on a five week election campaign.

The 2008 federal election officially got underway Sunday when Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean agreed to dissolve Parliament on the request of Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Voters will go to the polls Oct. 14.

A full slate of candidates representing all major federal political parties have thrown their hats into the ring for the job in Wild Rose.

Lisa Fox is running for the Green Party, Jeff Horvath for the New Democratic Party, Blake Richards for the Conservatives, and Jenn Turcott for the Liberals.

Richards won the nomination vote for his party when Sundre's own Myron Thompson announced his retirement effective the next federal election, last November.

Richards, originally from Olds, has worked with Thompson for seven years and was his campaign manager for several elections.

"I got involved back at the start of the Reform Party with the Reform movement and have been involved with that through the Canadian Alliance and (now) into the Conservative Party," said Richards.

Now living in Airdrie with his wife and young son, he has worked as a realtor for the last five years.

Richards was nominated last year and said he's looking forward to going door to door in all municipalities.

"I really believe that politics is about representing people, so to me it's important to be out meeting people and for them to meet me."

"I'm looking forward to being out meeting with them and demonstrating how hard I will work for them in the job and I sure hope for their support."

The Airdrie Conservative is joined in the race by another former Olds resident, Jenn Turcott who is said to be her party's youngest contender in the race.

Turcott currently works in municipal politics for the City of Calgary as a community assistant for the Office of the Alderman.

Known for her tireless enthusiasm and dedication to politics in Wild Rose, she has been active in the Wild Rose Federal Liberal Riding Association for the past three years.

Turcott says she is excited by, and proud of, the Liberal Party's Green Shift plan, which she says will help Canadians reduce their impact on the environment in an economically sustainable manner.

The Green Party candidate hails from Cochrane. Fox is actively involved in grassroots environmental initiatives and commits a great deal of her time to several societies that are dedicated to fostering sustainable communities and promoting sustainable and responsible management of land and water.

Fox serves on the Bow River Basin Council and is an active Board Member of both the Calgary Regional Airshed Zone and the Cochrane Environmental Action Committee. She has recently been appointed to the Executive of the Alberta Environmental Network and is working with the National Water, Fisheries and Oceans Caucus toward the development of a national water policy.

"I am a member of the Green Party of Canada because I fundamentally believe that the Green Party is the only political party in Canada with principles that I can support and vote with. I am confident that the Green Party values represent the values of my children and the children of our future," says Fox.

Canmore resident Jeff Horvath is a guidance counsellor at Morley Community School on the Stoney First Nation, counselling students on education, behaviour, social and psychological issues and works with community elders and will be representing the NDP on the Oct. 14 ballot.

Support workers protest outside hospital

BY TIM DENOUDSTEN
Didsbury Review

Carrying signs and waving flags, Didsbury Hospital support workers were out in force Sept. 3 to protest what they see as unfair treatment by the provincial government.

A total of 7,500 maintenance and clerical workers throughout this local of Calgary Health Region have been without a union contract since the end of March.

The primary issue at stake is what union members perceive as unjust inequities in pay relative to their co-workers.

"We'd like to be equal with everyone else," said Candy Northcott, chairperson of the local union chapter and a stores attendant at the Didsbury Hospital. "We have a lot of staff here and a lot of support... To get treated fairly is what we want."

"The members are out today to show that they support the (bargaining) team, and that this is a big deal," said Alberta Union of Provincial Employees (AUPE) president Doug Knight, citing the lack of weekend and shift premiums for support workers as one example of inequality.

"If you're working side-by-side with someone on a night shift... you should be (paid) the same... differential for working that night, as the person you're working beside," he said.

"No money's come forward even after (Premier Ed) Stelmach has promised it."

Staffing is becoming an increasingly significant concern as workers retire and new facilities are coming online, said Knight, adding that some support employees are taking second and third jobs to meet rent payments and other expenses.

"If you're not going to pay your staff enough to (attract others) into the field, it's a problem."

A mediator has been brought in to resolve the dispute after negotiations between the government and union representatives broke down.

"The CHR is being a bit recalcitrant. It seems like they don't want to make a deal," said Knight.

Because the hospital workers are considered to be an essential service, they cannot take strike action, and will have to go to binding arbitration if mediation fails.

"We prefer to make a deal at the table," indicated Knight, noting that arbitration typically yields a less favourable result for the union.

"I'm hoping the mediator will write a report that will be satisfactory to membership."

Alberta Health Services officials could not be reached for comment.

Town council opts out of postal review

BY TIM DENOUDSTEN
Didsbury Review

Didsbury town council has decided not to participate in the Canada Post Strategic Review, a federal government initiative examining current service levels and possible deregulation of mail delivery.

Council voted during its last meeting to take no further action on correspondence received from the Canadian Union of Postal Workers opposing the proposed deregulation.

"Council felt at this time that they were not comfortable with putting forward a letter of support for the (union)," explained Didsbury mayor Brian Wittal. "We decided just to accept the information as presented with no further follow-up on it."

Deregulation would allow privatized corporations to become involved in letter delivery, which could result in poorer service to rural communities, the union stated in its letter.

Wittal isn't convinced that will be the case.

"The one side is claiming that costs are going to go up extremely if we go away from the current system that we have into a privatized system," he said, indicating that increased competition can sometimes result in lower consumer costs, as in the case of phone systems.

It's hard to say at this point how rural postal service could be affected by any such change, he added.

"If it is privatized, no doubt they will look at things like volume and growth and potential for profitability, and small centres certainly are going to be more difficult for them to service profitably," said Wittal, but noted that mail delivery expenses are already a concern for the post office.

"There's no guarantee that (reduced service levels) may not happen in the current environment as well."

Council for Mountain View County has already submitted a report to the strategic review advisory panel detailing its municipal postal delivery concerns.

To get more information or to participate in the federal government's Canada Post Corporation Strategic Review, visit www.cpscstrategicreview.gc.ca. The deadline for submissions is Sept. 2.

Notice to grain producers

New declaration system for western Canadian wheat

You are now required to sign a Declaration of Eligibility for the Class form annually at every licensed facility where you deliver to confirm that your wheat is eligible for a specific western Canadian wheat class.

Carefully store and track your harvest

Maintain careful records to track your wheat — in storage and during delivery.

Know what you deliver

If you want your wheat to be graded as any class other than feed, you must deliver a registered variety.

Declare your wheat at delivery

Be ready to declare that your wheat is eligible for a specific class of western Canadian wheat.

If you have someone hauling grain for you, sign the declaration at the elevator before delivery and make sure your transporter knows your wheat's class.

Local 'offsets' helping

BY TIM DENOUDSTEN
Didsbury Review

Global warming continues to be a hot topic, and a Didsbury-based company is working to combat the problem and inject new revenue into an old vocation.

Since the provincial Climate Change and Emissions Management Act was introduced last year, carbon emissions in excess of a certain target level have been subject to a carbon tax of $15 per tonne, which is paid into an environmental technology fund.

To reduce their tax expense, oil companies and other emitters have the option to purchase carbon credits – also known as 'offsets' – from suppliers, at a cost less than the tax amount.

Suppliers include farmers, who can have a positive impact on the environment by adopting processes such as zero tilling and good manure management.

"This is a way to encourage them, since they're not regulated, to practise good environmental stewardship on the land," explains Robert Coulter, president of Emission Credits Corporation, which acts as an intermediary between buyers and sellers of credits.

The company has handled over $2 million in offset credit transactions so far this year.

"That helps the environment now... (and) of course, farmers get paid by the large carbon emitters, so that creates a value-added revenue source that the farmer didn't expect," says Coulter.

Recently, the company has streamlined the lengthy negotiation process into an online auction through the World Energy Solutions Green Exchange. Coulter says the new electronic format has several advantages, including higher prices and a quicker turnaround.

"People bid up the price. That's a better deal for our farm families, because of course, the better price that we get, the more money they get in their pockets," he explains. "Plus it's a process we can keep doing it over and over again."

The auction, which resulted in the transfer of over 107,000 tonnes of offsets, was hailed as a success by Phil Adams, chief operating officer of World Energy.

"In our work with ECC, we see yet another example of the power of our auction platform to bring greater liquidity and transparency to markets, creating market lift and needed confidence to transact," Adams stated in a press release.

Coulter says that he plans to continue doing online auctions in the future.

However, he admits that carbon offsets are only a temporary solution until government initiatives, like the carbon capture and storage pipeline, which will capture emissions and funnel them deep into the earth, are completed.

"Right now, I see (offsets) as a bridge. Once the pipeline gets built, which is supposed to happen sometime in 2015 or so, there may not be as much of a need for offsets," indicates Coulter. "That's all going to take time, so while they're waiting for those technologies to help the environment, farmers are helping the environment right now."

Letter to the editor

Where were the protests during shaken baby case?

Reply to Tamara Chaney's letter to the editor, Aug. 26/08.

The only part of your letter I agree with is your mention of calf roping as being brutal on the calves. The calves are going full tilt one way. They are roped and their body weight and momentum of their forward movement is instantly stopped by the rope, concentrating all that force on their neck, causing them to snap backwards. This can break their neck. Not cool.

I'm not too concerned about the treatment of rodeo stock unless they are beaten by their owners. I have no use for any human who beats on any animal, large or small and traumatizes it. But it happens. These people don't deserve to own animals.

Worse yet, Alberta has seen cases of severe neglect and starving of livestock and pets to death. Half-starved livestock and pets is just about as low a thing an animal owner can do. I don't go to rodeos anymore but when I did, I saw well-fed livestock. None of them looked too traumatized to me. Go to a zoo. All some animals have to do is pace. Or to a circus. These animals are exploited; sickening really. Remember, thousands of wild animals are on the endangered list, many are gone forever due to human activities such as overhunting, global warming, loss of habitat because of man's imprint on planet earth. What about human suffering like the 'shaken baby' case in the courts last year and the year before? Shaken babies suffer brain damage from which they never recover! Why didn't your group protest about that? Or are animals more important than babies in some people's world?

Election issues abound

What should the election be about?

Some say, the Liberals should still be accountable for a sponsorship scandal that happened over a decade ago when attempting to fight separatism in Quebec. We rightly sent them to the political penalty box for the foul and some want to keep them there for ever.

In contrast to today, people are dying now of Listeriosis because Mr. Harper deregulated Canada's principal meat packaging plant as a "test" project for further deregulation. I'd say Mr. Harper's team deserves a game misconduct penalty and he deserves a life-time suspension from ever playing again.

Political penalties should be proportional to the misconduct. The ultimate political referee, you and me voters, should send Mr. Harper out of the political arena for good.

Letter to the Editor

Not persuaded to change view of rodeo cruelty

Re: Jo Lawes, "Rodeo animals not abused, contrary to letter".

Being an avid animal welfare supporter, I'm afraid we're going to have to agree to disagree when it comes to rodeos being abusive to animals. I do appreciate your letter of reply and give you a heartfelt thank you for the care you provide for your animals. You never did answer my question in regards to the need for these rodeo events, though. You yourself wrote, "I know more people who have been injured or killed competing in rodeo than animals". Loved ones are hurt, and many lose their lives to the rodeo, so why do we continue on with this needless sport?

How can you compare a horse bucking out of pleasure, free in a pasture, to a horse in a corral/stadium with a person on its back digging metal spurs into its sides? Sharp, dull, locked or free-rolling spurs, thick or thin skin, the horse still feels pain and is not bucking out of pleasure. In regards to mutton busting, am I to understand it's all right to terrify an animal because the predator/human dropped on its back is less than 40 pounds? I'd like to believe that if a child were informed that, in truth, mutton busting scares the animal, they wouldn't take part in it. Children have the astounding ability to feel deep compassion for other living beings. Also, I am well aware that chuckwagons have been around from the beginning of Canada's history, but correct me if I'm wrong, we're not taming the wild west anymore, are we? In my 31 years on this earth I don't recall ever seeing someone race past me in a chuckwagon, heading off into the sunset to claim their plot of land!

Why bring the Mexican rodeo into this? Am I to believe that our rodeo is "better" than theirs because we don't torture the bulls to death? Is this how we justify our acts of cruelty, by pointing a finger at another country or person, claiming their actions are worse than ours? It is not OK to bring harm to another sentient being, period!

You suggested I educate myself specifically with the animal welfare section of the rodeo rule book. Having petitioned the Canadian government in relation to its archaic animal welfare laws, I am well educated in that area. Granted, I do not have a copy of the rodeo rule book, but I do have an exact copy of Canada's animal welfare laws; I can't imagine they greatly differ. As far as the SPCA goes, with two animal welfare officers in Alberta, it is impossible for them to keep on top of the ever rising pile of animal abuse cases in our province. You also invited me to attend the next local rodeo with an open mind, suggesting that I would have a different outlook. I'm afraid my feelings towards the rodeo are unwavering. Watching what I believe to be animal abuse is not how I like to spend my time. I'd much prefer observing an animal in its natural state, grazing in a field, running free, in peace.

I know the rodeo is part of Canada's history, but it doesn't need to continue as such. Small steps are being taken towards a cruelty-free rodeo. Countless animal welfare groups are fighting for cruelty-free rodeo and will continue to do so until the exploitation stops. Vancouver, B.C. has set an example by banning calf roping; others will follow suit. I know the rodeo is a way of life for many wonderful, caring, loving, hard-working people. I am not saying ban the rodeo, I'm saying stop the abuse. One needs only to place themselves in the animal's position to know which events are harmful.

JEAN (MARY MARGARET) HOLLAND (NEE GRANT)

Born in 1919, Jean moved on to once again dance with her beloved husband Les on Friday, August 29, 2008.

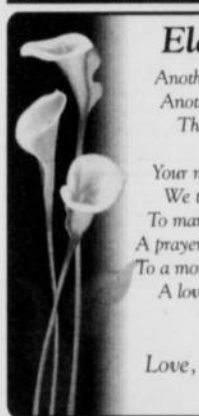

Jean, Les and their family moved to Teulon, Manitoba in 1948. She worked as a nurse's aide at Hunter Memorial Hospital from 1960 to 1973. She was actively involved in helping Les in the Teulon Gymnastics Club from 1950 to 1981 and was a 4H leader for many years. Jean was also an active member of the Teulon United Church, United Church Circle, the Agricultural Society, Junior Hospital Guild, Women's Institute, Teulon Curling Club and was instrumental in having the Art Centre moved from Stonewall to Teulon. Jean found great joy in participating in the annual Santa Claus and Teulon Days parades. She had a great deal of fun planning costumes for any event where she could dress herself and others. In later years one of her favorite hobbies was clogging.

Predeceased by her parents Robert and Minnie Grant (nee Kerwin), her loving husband Les and her daughter Patricia Dawn Brownlee, she will be forever missed by her daughter Bunny (Fred Philpott), her grandchildren Susan, Lynne and Russell (Cheryl) Brownlee; Kerri and Morene Philpott and her great-grandchildren Michael, Maya, Emily and Emma as well as special friend Debbie, Justin and Aaron and many nieces and nephews.

As per Jean's wishes, there will be no services. Her wish was you go out for ice cream and celebrate her life. In lieu of flowers, please buy yourself a flower and say it was from Jean.

Runners, seniors wanted

Little Wonders Playschool which opens on Monday, September 8, would thoroughly appreciate a senior or a grandparent to join in the classes on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. They would read to the little ones, do crafts and games and help with the outer clothing and shoes on breaks. Look for Linda's table at the Didsbury Showcase on September 18 at the Didsbury curling rink (lower floor) from 6 to 9 p.m. Phone Linda at 335-3806 for more details or to arrange for a visit.

Didsbury's Annual Terry Fox Run is being held today. This is the 28th anniversary of the Marathon of Hope. Registration begins at 12:30 p.m. at the Memorial Complex and the run begins at 1 p.m. In 2007, the Didsbury Run raised $5,149 and the committee appreciates the efforts of all of the people who came out to participate. As of 2007, our community has raised $83,573.51. Questions? Phone Grant or Brenda at 335-2390.

Chamber Chat

It's time to thank the business community. If it's not dogsled races or fashion shows and booth sales or Christmas decorating, it must be Small Business Week! And that's exactly what the Didsbury & District Chamber of Commerce is gearing up for right now ... the annual Small Business Gala, Saturday, October 18 at the Memorial Complex.

Small Business Week is a national annual celebration organized by the Business Development Bank of Canada in cooperation with the Canadian Chamber of Commerce held during the latter part of October.

It pays tribute to the significant contribution that small and medium-sized business owners make to our economy and gives them an opportunity to network with those interested in small business and dedicated to its development.

For those of us in Didsbury, the chamber's gala event does exactly that, in a social, very special evening out. Business people and their customers all gather for an evening of fun and visiting. "It's not a stuffy event at all," says Gala Chair, Kathleen Windsor. "We have great entertainment, a silent auction, and of course, the presentation of the Small Business of the Year Award! Everyone has such a great time, they come back every year."

Now's also time to submit your nominations for Didsbury's Small Business of the Year Award. Designed to recognize Didsbury and district businesses that provide top quality customer service and community support, the Award showcases the entrepreneurial spirit found in our business community.

If you know a business that goes above and beyond to serve you better, get your nomination in before September 30th. If you have any questions about the award, call Kathleen at 403-335-9445. If you would like tickets to the Gala, call Tara at 403-335-4800.

The first get-together after the summer break is tomorrow night, September 10, at the Didsbury Golf Club.
